AG-018-007 International Refugee Organization (IRO) 1945-1952

Scope and Content

The IRO records in the United Nations Archives (14 linear feet) were received from the United States Branch Office of the High Commissioner for Refugees. They are records of the Washington Office of the IRO and its Preparatory Commission respectively of its forerunner the Intergovernmental Committee on Refugees. The records consist of some 2,800 case files re. tracing and resettlement of refugees. Alphabetical name indexes exist. These files would typically be disposed, however, they may prove helpful in dealing with inquiries relating to social security matters, IRO-care and family history of World War II refugees and displaced persons; therefore, they should be kept in the Archives for a limited time.

Apart from the case files the following odd papers and printed publications have been included also in this archives group: Inventory of IRO Staff Members, Displaced Persons Professional Medical Register, Telephone Directory, Personnel Regulations and their Implementation, Adoption of an Identity and Travel Document for Refugees, History and Work of the IRO.

Administrative History

The IRO was a non-permanent UN specialized agency established following an Economic and Social Council resolution of 16 February 1946 to solve the problem of refugees and displaced persons created by the Second World War and its immediate aftermath. Its constitution was drawn up by a special committee of the Council (see E/REF documents) and approved by the General Assembly in December 1946. A Preparatory Commission which was constituted on 31 December 1946, met in Geneva in February 1947, and began its interim work on 1 July by taking over some of the functions and some of the staff of the UNRRA and the Intergovernmental Committee on Refugees (IGCR).

Note: This Committee was organized in London in August 1938 as a result of the Evian Conference of July 1938 which had been called by President Roosevelt. Its main purpose was to assist in the resettlement of refugees from European countries allowing permanent immigration. In 1943, the Committee's mandate and structure was extended to longer-term problems of the postwar period. A representative of the Committee in Washington maintained liaison with government agencies and private individuals and organizations cooperating with the Committee in its relief activities. It ceased to exist in 1947 and its functions and records were transferred to the International Refugee Organization of the United Nations. The IRO itself was not officially established until 20 August 1948 when fifteen States, whose contributions totaled 75 per cent of IRO's main operational budget had subscribed to the Constitution. Its responsibilities in connexion with refugees and displaced persons included repatriation, care and maintenance, legal and political protection, transport and resettlement. In addition, IRO operated an International Tracing Service.

The IRO consisted basically of the General Council, which was the policy-making body; the Executive Committee; and the Director-General and his staff. Three United States citizens - Arthur J. Altmeyer, William H. Tuck, and J. Donald Kingsley - served successively as Director-General, leading a staff that at its peak numbered nearly 5,700 employees. With Headquarters in Geneva, IRO had a number of field offices throughout the world.

After several extensions of its life, IRO closed its operations on 31 January 1952 and after a liquidation period, went out of existence on 30 September 1953. [Note: For further information on its past activities see appropriate volumes of the UN Yearbook]. By that time many of its responsibilities had been assumed by other agencies - national, intergovernmental, private and international. Of particular importance were the Office of the High Commissioner for Refugees, established at Geneva in January 1951 as a part of the United Nations, and the Intergovernmental Committee for European Migration (originally PICMME), set up in December 1951.

Administrative History

The European Regional Office was established in London early in 1944 as a result of the understanding reached among the major Member States during the negotiation of the UNRRA Agreement. It was in a sense the successor to the Inter-Allied Committee on Post-War Requirements, whose head, Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, became Deputy Director General of Administration. He shared the executive direction with Nicolai Feonov, Deputy Director General for Supply, and Lithgow Osborne, Deputy Director General for Services and Areas. Together the three formed an Administrative Council, reporting to the Director General. By the end of 1944 the Director General had delegated to ERO the responsibility for supervision of administration and operations for all Missions in Northwest Europe, and soon thereafter for Displaced Persons Operation and other European Missions.

The Administrative structure of ERO underwent many changes, but its major outlines remained fairly stable after the end of 1945. The chief executive, superseding the Administrative Council, was the Personal Representative of the Director General, three major Departments were established, dealing respectively with Supply Relief Services, and Finance and Administration, and each divided into operating and service Divisions, Branches, and Sections. The Registry classification system indicates the major functional groupings.

The ERO took a major part in the closing and liquidation of the European Missions and the Displaced Persons Operations. The archives of those offices were returned to Headquarters in Washington, D.C. through London.

Administrative History

In May 1944 the first small UNRRA Observer Mission arrived in Italy. The Observer Mission's report, as approved by the Council, provided for a total expenditure of fifty million dollars, which was to provide for supplementary food for needy nursing women and expectant mothers, and children up to 15 years of age, essential medical and sanitary supplies, assistance in rehousing and resettlement of Italian refugees displaced within Italy by reason of war, and care and repatriation of UN displaced persons in Italy eligible for UNRRA aid.

On 8 March 1945 an Agreement with Italy was signed. The Agreement provided for the establishment of a Joint Committee, with Lodovico Montini as chairman of the Italian Government Delegation for Relations with UNRRA, and the Chief of Mission as head of the UNRRA representation. The two chairmen were authorized to conclude... all agreements necessary to the effectuation of the purposes of this Agreement. Under the financial provisions of the Agreement, the Italian Government undertook to contribute in local currency a sum of lire corresponding to the cost of foreign exchange incurred by UNRRA for the services and supplies which it furnishes to Italy. This fund, known as The Lire Fund, was used to meet the Administration's expenses in Italian currency, and, by agreement between the chairman of the Delegation and the Chief of the Mission, to finance additional relief and rehabilitation programmes in Italy.

In 1945 UNRRA's supplementary feeding program was restricted to the territory under the jurisdiction of the Italian Government, the area south of the Pisa-Rimini line. Until the Mission developed a proper regional organization in 1946, the district welfare officers devoted more of their efforts to expediting supply distribution than to welfare work. A total of 116,000 tons was imported by UNRRA in 1945. Under the terms of the first Agreement, supplies were received by the UNRRA mission and title to them was only transferred to the Italian Government after their allocation had been determined by agreement between the Delegation and the Mission.

By the summer of 1945 it was clear that Italy's need for economic assistance would continue. It was estimated that about 425 million dollars would be required in 1946, half to be spent on food, and the other half to get the country's industry and agriculture on the way to rehabilitation with Italy's economic independence as the eventual goal. The Administration took over responsibility for economic aid to Italy from 1 January 1946. A new supplementary Agreement preserved many features of the old, although in certain particulars it had to be adapted to the new form and scope of aid being given. The Italian Government was no longer called upon to match in Italian currency the value of the UNRRA supplies, but instead it accepted the usual undertaking to pay the net proceeds of sale of UNRRA supplies into a special Government account (the Lire Fund). From this account the Government engaged to pay the Administration's expenses in lire and to finance relief and rehabilitation programmes.

Whereas under the 1945 programme district welfare officers had been able to observe the distribution of UNRRA supplies through the supplementary feeding programme, it was clear that the new responsibilities would require the development of an expanded system of observation of distribution and at the same time would call for UNRRA representation throughout the country. Accordingly eight regions were set up with regional directors responsible to the Mission Executive Officer for coordinating the activities of the various divisional representatives in their Regions. Similarly, in March 1946 a North Italy Industrial Rehabilitation Office was set up in Milan, the industrial center of Italy, to facilitate the carrying out of the industrial rehabilitation programme.

The UNRRA ports and shipping organization in Italy had a staff of nearly 70 people. The UNRRA port officers established in the seven principal ports of Italy fed information regarding port capacity, availability of berths, port clearance facilities, and internal transport resources to Mission Headquarters daily. The Mission employed the firm of S.A. Sorveglianza as reception agents with the responsibility of obtaining and preparing the necessary documents, acting as receivers of UNRRA cargo, guarding, tallying, and ensuring careful discharge of the supplies. Under the 1946 program, all UNRRA supplies were transferred to the Italian Government at the end of ship's tackle. The Istituto Nazionale per il Commercio Estero (National Institute for Foreign Trade), a Government organization under the Ministry of Foreign Trade, was responsible for the reception of supplies on behalf of the Italian Government. With the concurrence of the Mission, it appointed sub-agents for handling the various types of goods.

Two joint committees were set up at the technical level to coordinate action between the Government and the Mission. The Joint Price Committee, set up in June 1946, was an advisory Committee to the Chief of Mission and the President of the Delegation. The Committee made recommendations regarding prices which became effective when they had been approved by the Chief of Mission and the President of the Delegation. In addition to price-fixing, the Committee also estimated maximum handling and distribution costs, thus agreeing upon the maximum amount which the distribution agencies could withhold from the gross proceeds of sale, which in turn determined the minimum net proceeds of sale that would accrue to the Lire Fund. In addition to the Joint Price Committee, a parallel Lire Fund Control Committee supervised the accounting of the Lire Fund and examined in detail the various projects developed for its expenditure.

UNRRA-CASAS

The need to provide assistance to the homeless led to the establishment of the Administrative Committee for Assistance to the Homeless (CASAS). Although UNRRA was not linked with CASAS in the title of the agency until late 1946, CASAS was from the beginning another of the joint undertakings between the Italian Government and the Mission characteristic of UNRRA's operations in Italy. The Executive Committee which governed CASAS consisted of representatives of various Italian Government agencies and offices and the UNRRA Mission. By autumn 1946, housing was generally regarded by the Mission as one of the main continuing activities to be financed out of the Lire Fund. On 30 December 1946 CASAS was abolished and a new UNRRA-CASAS was set up under the Ministry of Public Works.

UNRRA-Tessile

The end of the war left most of Italy's large textile industry in the north of the country intact but idle. The Government and UNRRA agreed, therefore, that the import of raw fibres should form a substantial part of the UNRRA programme, with the purpose of rehabilitating this important industry and at the same time providing the essential clothing so badly needed by the population. It soon became evident that the equitable distribution of the products at controlled prices would present a major problem, and as a result of this, an Italian Government decree at the end of August 1946 set up the UNRRA-Tessile Committee. The Mission was officially represented on the Committee and, in effect, UNRRA-Tessile was a joint undertaking.

UNRRA-AFHQ

A small liaison office in Caserta developed from the Balkan Mission when Allied Force Headquarters (AFHQ) moved from Algiers in July 1944. For some time its principal function was to arrange with the military authorities for shipment of UNRRA supplies within the region it subsequently became primarily a centre for procurement of surplus military supplies.

Jeanne d'Arc Refugee Centre, Philippeville, Algeria.

The Jeanne d'Arc Refugee Centre was taken over from the British military authorities on 20 October 1944, for the purpose of receiving expected refugees from Spain. In November 1944 the North African Refugee Centre (established and maintained by the US Government's Foreign Economic Administration), at Casablanca, Morocco, was closed down, the stores being transferred to Philippeville and the refugees being sent to the Middle East Camps. A large staff and large quantities of stores were accumulated at Philippeville Camp and its subsidiary Port Office and warehouse in Algiers but few refugees were received there. It was practically closed down in June 1945, but held in reserve until liquidated in October-November of that year. The Centre originally came under the control of the Balkan Mission, but was transferred to the control of the Italy Mission on 1 January 1945.

Administrative History

UNRRA operations in Austria began in the summer of 1945 with the dispatch of teams of UNRRA workers to assist the occupying Military Governments in the administration of displaced persons camps. Zone Directors in the French, British, and United States Zones supervised this camp management work under the close control of military officials. A Central Headquarters was formally established in Vienna by an agreement dated 26 November 1945, and Brigadier R.H.R. Parminter became Director-in-Chief.

In the meantime the UNRRA Council had resolved in August that Austria should be treated as a liberated area and hence should be eligible to receive relief and rehabilitation assistance. Brigadier Parminter was instructed, on his appointment in September, that his duties would include relief and rehabilitation work as well as responsibility for displaced persons operations. Although the two functions were maintained as distinct parts at the beginning, they were gradually integrated into a single Mission office. Brigadier Parminter assumed the title of Chief of Mission on 1 January 1946.

The peak of the Mission's operations was reached in August 1946. When the total staff numbered 1,368 but after this date there was a continual decrease leading to the transfer of displaced persons work to IRO on 30 June 1947 and the final liquidation of the Mission on 29 February 1948.

The records listed below were received by the United Nations in extreme disorder, and a few significant files appear to have been lost. The remaining files have been arranged as nearly as possible to conform to the pattern of the administrative structure of the Mission. Because the Displaced Persons Organization maintained a status almost apart from the Mission proper during most of its life, its files were kept separately. Most of the headquarters files on this work (which included also many of the papers of the Mission's Department of Relief Services) were turned over to IRO. Remaining files on DP work comprise most of the material listed below under the three zone Headquarters and their field offices.

Administrative History

The European Regional Office was established in London early in 1944 as a result of the understanding reached among the major Member States during the negotiation of the UNRRA Agreement. It was in a sense the successor to the Inter-Allied Committee on Post-War Requirements, whose head, Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, became Deputy Director General of Administration. He shared the executive direction with Nicolai Feonov, Deputy Director General for Supply, and Lithgow Osborne, Deputy Director General for Services and Areas. Together the three formed an Administrative Council, reporting to the Director General. By the end of 1944 the Director General had delegated to ERO the responsibility for supervision of administration and operations for all Missions in Northwest Europe, and soon thereafter for Displaced Persons Operation and other European Missions.

The Administrative structure of ERO underwent many changes, but its major outlines remained fairly stable after the end of 1945. The chief executive, superseding the Administrative Council, was the Personal Representative of the Director General, three major Departments were established, dealing respectively with Supply Relief Services, and Finance and Administration, and each divided into operating and service Divisions, Branches, and Sections. The Registry classification system indicates the major functional groupings.

The ERO took a major part in the closing and liquidation of the European Missions and the Displaced Persons Operations. The archives of those offices were returned to Headquarters in Washington, D.C. through London.

Administrative History

The executive authority of UNRRA was vested in the Director-General, who was appointed by the Council on the nomination by unanimous vote of the Central Committee. The first Director-General was Herbert H. Lehman, appointed on 1 January 1944. Succeeding him were Fiorello H. LaGuardia, 1 April 1946 - 31 December 1946, and Major-General Lowell P. Rooks, 1 January 1947 - 30 September 1948. Attached to this office and appointed by the Director-General were an Assistant to the Director-General and a Senior Deputy Director-General, who acted as principal adviser and the channel of authority from the Director-General to other units of the Administration. In the next level of authority were the Deputy Directors-General in charge of departments. These included Deputy Directors-General respectively for the Bureau of Areas, the Bureau of Supply, the Bureau of Finance and Administration, the Secretariat, for Regional Liaison, and for Liaison with American Republics. In May 1945 the Bureau of Areas and the Office of Regional Liaison were abolished.

On 1 January 1946, the post of Chief Executive Officer was established to coordinate the work of the Bureaus, Offices, and Divisions. The Office of the Director-General ended on 31 September 1948, and executive responsibility for remaining UNRRA functions was then assumed by Harry E. Howell, Administrator for Liquidation.

The duties and responsibilities of the Director-General included the following:

- To carry out with full power and responsibility all relief operations within the limits of available resources and the broad policies determined by the Council or its Central Committee; in conjunction with the military and other appropriate authorities of the United Nations to prepare plans for the emergency relief of civilian population of any area occupied by the United Nations armed forces, arrange for the procurement and assembly of the necessary supplies, and create the emergency organization required for this purpose.

- To formulate and recommend measures for individual or joint action by member governments for the coordination of purchasing, the use of ships, and other procurement activities in the period following cessation of hostilities, with a view to integrating the activities of the Administration with the total movement of supplies and for the purpose of achieving an equitable distribution of available supplies, and to administer such coordination measures as may be authorized by the member governments.

- To appoint Deputy Directors-General, officers, expert personnel, and staff, and to delegate to them such powers as are deemed appropriate; to supply such Secretariat and other staff and facilities as shall be required by the Council and its committees, including Regional Committees and Sub-Committees.

- To make periodic reports to the Central Committee and the Council covering the progress of the Administration's activities; to transmit periodic reports covering the activities of the Administration within each region to the Council, the Central Committee and the respective Regional Committees.

- To submit to the Council an annual budget, and such supplementary budgets as may be required, covering the administrative expenses of the Administration; to submit quarterly reports of operating and Administration expenditures and receipts.

- To consult with member governments for the purpose of carrying out measures with respect to the repatriation or return of Displaced Persons.

- To determine the exact geographical areas in which the Administration will operate and the kind of operations it will undertake in each case, after consultation with and with the consent of the appropriate governing authority.

- To preside at the opening of Council sessions until a Chairman has been elected; in consultation with the Central Committee, and subject to the concurrence of the Council, to fix the time and place of meetings and prepare the provisional agendas of the Central Committee, the Council, and the Standing Committees.

- To arrange, through the appropriate national and inter-governmental agencies, for the necessary allocation and procurement of supplies in order to create balanced reserves.

- To arrange for the transfer of functions of UNRRA to the United Nations.

The Headquarters Office in Washington was the administrative centre for the entire organization, where the major policies in all fields were formulated. It was also the centre for the direct supervision of the offices and missions in the Far East, and for recruitment of personnel and procurement of supplies from the United States and Canada.

S-1541 Executive Office - Secretariat - Subject Files 1938-1949

Scope and Content

The Secretariat consisted of a small staff, headed by a Deputy Director-General, whose principal function was to service the UNRRA Council and its committees. It was responsible for arranging and preparing for Council sessions and committee meetings; for providing technical and secretarial services, including drafting, reproduction, translation, and distribution of documents; and for maintaining official membership lists and records and documents of the Council and the committees.

The Secretariat was also intended originally to serve as a general intelligence, liaison and reporting staff for the Director-General, but most of these functions, except for the compilation of the Director-General's reports to the Central Committee, were taken over by other offices of UNRRA.

The Secretariat was abolished effective 15 October 1947 (HQ Adm. Order 103, Supp. 12), its remaining functions being transferred to the Office of the Chief Executive Officer and (documents work) to the Records Section of the Bureau of Administration.

S-1552 Executive Offices - Office of the Diplomatic Adviser - Subject Files 1943-1949

Scope and Content

On 1 January 1944, UNRRA hired a "Political Adviser", in order to "advise on relations with governments and international organizations". On 16 January 1944, the title of this office was changed to "Diplomatic Adviser". The office was under the immediate supervision of the Director-General, its internal organization consisting of, in addition to the Diplomatic Adviser, one or two Assistant Diplomatic Advisers, one or two Assistants to the Diplomatic Adviser, and a Political Analyst. The Diplomatic Adviser's Office had no special representative attached to the European Regional Office.

In brief, the activities of the Office of the Diplomatic Adviser included the following:

To advise the Director-General and other officials in the Administration on all international political questions and negotiations with governments and to assist in the development of a policy in these fields.

To participate in the preparatory stages of the negotiations with governments relative to the initiation of projects and operations in particular countries, to obtain governmental sanction for exploratory or more permanent operating missions of UNRRA and to assist in the framing of agreements and drawing up of formal international instruments.

To follow developments abroad which might affect the operations of UNRRA.

To maintain continual liaison with the foreign diplomatic representatives in Washington and furnish opportunities for the discussion of the whole range of UNRRA's activities, from general questions of policy to innumerable points of detail.

To maintain liaison with the United States Congress and the State Department on such matters as appropriations, immunities and personnel.

To arrange with governments for the proper means of communications, and to draft or initial all important formal notes and telegrams to heads of states, ministers of foreign affairs, and chiefs of Diplomatic Missions in Washington. All correspondence of a political or diplomatic nature had to be cleared through or coordinated by the Diplomatic Adviser's Office.

To extract contributions from non-invaded countries and to assist the Chairman of the UN Committee of UNRRA with the drafting of cables to foreign governments asking them to implement the pertinent Council Resolutions regarding contributions.

To plan and organize Diplomatic UNRRA Missions to contributing member governments, explain the purpose of the mission to the respective diplomatic representatives in Washington, build up support for the Administration and to keep those countries informed of their duties and obligations to UNRRA.

To assist in the recruitment of qualified international personnel and to secure necessary visas and passports for such personnel.

To advise the Office of Public Information in order to clarify for the public the position of UNRRA.

On 1 January 1944, UNRRA hired a "Political Adviser", in order to "advise on relations with governments and international organizations". On 16 January 1944, the title of this office was changed to "Diplomatic Adviser". The office was under the immediate supervision of the Director-General, its internal organization consisting of, in addition to the Diplomatic Adviser, one or two Assistant Diplomatic Advisers, one or two Assistants to the Diplomatic Adviser, and a Political Analyst. The Diplomatic Adviser's Office had no special representative attached to the European Regional Office.

In brief, the activities of the Office of the Diplomatic Adviser included the following:

To advise the Director-General and other officials in the Administration on all international political questions and negotiations with governments and to assist in the development of a policy in these fields.

To participate in the preparatory stages of the negotiations with governments relative to the initiation of projects and operations in particular countries, to obtain governmental sanction for exploratory or more permanent operating missions of UNRRA and to assist in the framing of agreements and drawing up of formal international instruments.

To follow developments abroad which might affect the operations of UNRRA.

To maintain continual liaison with the foreign diplomatic representatives in Washington and furnish opportunities for the discussion of the whole range of UNRRA's activities, from general questions of policy to innumerable points of detail.

To maintain liaison with the United States Congress and the State Department on such matters as appropriations, immunities and personnel.

To arrange with governments for the proper means of communications, and to draft or initial all important formal notes and telegrams to heads of states, ministers of foreign affairs, and chiefs of Diplomatic Missions in Washington. All correspondence of a political or diplomatic nature had to be cleared through or coordinated by the Diplomatic Adviser's Office.

To extract contributions from non-invaded countries and to assist the Chairman of the UN Committee of UNRRA with the drafting of cables to foreign governments asking them to implement the pertinent Council Resolutions regarding contributions.

To plan and organize Diplomatic UNRRA Missions to contributing member governments, explain the purpose of the mission to the respective diplomatic representatives in Washington, build up support for the Administration and to keep those countries informed of their duties and obligations to UNRRA.

To assist in the recruitment of qualified international personnel and to secure necessary visas and passports for such personnel.

To advise the Office of Public Information in order to clarify for the public the position of UNRRA.

Administrative History

The Divisions of Welfare, Health, and Displaced Persons were first organized in Feb. 1944. On 3 May 1945 these functional Divisions, originally responsible directly to the Director General, were combined to form the new Bureau of Services. At the same time the functions of the Camps Division of the Bureau of Areas were transferred to the Displaced Persons Division and the Welfare Division in ERO was abolished. On 13 April 1946, the Welfare Division merged with the Displaced Persons Division to form the Division of Repatriation and Welfare. There was also established on this date the Office for Voluntary and International Agency Liaison (OVIALL), to consolidate the several units in UNRRA dealing with such agencies. In the process of its organization, the Organized Groups Section of the Office of Public Information and certain functions of the Group and Organization Branch of the Contributed Supplies Division were transferred to OVIALL. In Sept. 1946 the Division of Repatriation and Welfare was shorn of its welfare functions and became the Division of Repatriation.

At various times, the functions of the Bureau of Services included the following:

- Provided the basic necessities of life during emergency periods, including temporary mass feeding, temporary shelter, and direct distribution of supplies.
- Ensured simple and fair procedures for determining which individuals and families were entitled to receive free supplies and services; ensured that the methods of distribution provided ready access to the supplies and services for all those who were entitled to receive them.
- Organized special relief and rehabilitational services for individuals, families or groups who required particular types of assistance.
- Reviewed requests for and made recommendations concerning supplies, equipment, and other facilities needed to carry out the functions listed above.
- Coordinated and regulated the activities of voluntary organizations interested in carrying out relief and rehabilitation programmes overseas, in so far as these responsibilities had been delegated to the Administration by member governments.
- Reviewed camp management operations and provided technical advice on management of camps; determined supply requirements of camps and policies affecting camps.
- Arranged for the identification and registration of displaced persons, and for their care and repatriation or return to place of former residence.

Note: Records of the Health Division were (in 1952) in the custody of the World Health Organization (WHO).

S-1252 Division of Repatriation and Welfare - Subject Files 1943-1949

Scope and Content

The Welfare Divisions of UNRRA was organized in Feb. 1944. Its internal organization at this time consisted of an Administrative Branch and a Research and Planning Branch. At the same time there was established a Displaced Persons Division.

On 3 May 1945, the functional Divisions of Welfare, Health and Displaced Persons, originally responsible directly to the Director General, were transferred to the Bureau of Services. At the same time the functions of the Camps Division of the Bureau of Areas were transferred to the Displaced Persons Division and the Welfare Division in ERO was abolished. On 13 April 1946, the Welfare Division merged with the Displaced Persons Division to form the Division of Repatriation and Welfare, which included 3 branches: the Reports and Records Branch, the Program Planning Branch, and the Operations Branch. Myer Cohen became the Director of this newly formed Division. In Sept. 1946 the Division was shorn of its welfare functions and became the Division of Repatriation; in Dec. 1946 it was merged with the Bureau of Services.

At various times, the welfare and displaced persons functions included the following:

Provided the basic necessities of life during emergency periods, including temporary mass feeding, temporary shelter, and direct distribution of supplies.

Ensured simple and fair procedures for determining which individuals and families were entitled to receive free supplies and services; ensured that the methods of distribution provided ready access to the supplies and services for all those who were entitled to receive them.

Organized special relief and rehabilitational services for individuals, families or groups who required particular types of assistance. Such services included day nurseries, foster home placement, institutional care and services, individual or family counseling, occupational training etc.

Reviewed requests for and made recommendations concerning supplies, equipment, and other facilities needed to carry out the functions listed above.

Coordinated and regulated the activities of voluntary organizations interested in carrying out relief and rehabilitation programs overseas, in so far as these responsibilities had been delegated to the Administration by member governments.

Reviewed camp management operations and provided technical advice on the management of camps; determined supply requirements of camps and policies affecting camps.

Arranged for the identification and registration of displaced persons, and for their care and repatriation or return to place of former residence.

S-1253 Division of Repatriation and Welfare - Country and Area Files 1940-1949

Scope and Content

The Welfare Divisions of UNRRA was organized in Feb. 1944. Its internal organization at this time consisted of an Administrative Branch and a Research and Planning Branch. At the same time there was established a Displaced Persons Division.

On 3 May 1945, the functional Divisions of Welfare, Health and Displaced Persons, originally responsible directly to the Director General, were transferred to the Bureau of Services. At the same time the functions of the Camps Division of the Bureau of Areas were transferred to the Displaced Persons Division and the Welfare Division in ERO was abolished. On 13 April 1946, the Welfare Division merged with the Displaced Persons Division to form the Division of Repatriation and Welfare, which included 3 branches: the Reports and Records Branch, the Program Planning Branch, and the Operations Branch. Myer Cohen became the Director of this newly formed Division. In Sept. 1946 the Division was shorn of its welfare functions and became the Division of Repatriation; in Dec. 1946 it was merged with the Bureau of Services.

At various times, the welfare and displaced persons functions included the following:

Provided the basic necessities of life during emergency periods, including temporary mass feeding, temporary shelter, and direct distribution of supplies.

Ensured simple and fair procedures for determining which individuals and families were entitled to receive free supplies and services; ensured that the methods of distribution provided ready access to the supplies and services for all those who were entitled to receive them.

Organized special relief and rehabilitational services for individuals, families or groups who required particular types of assistance. Such services included day nurseries, foster home placement, institutional care and services, individual or family counseling, occupational training etc.

Reviewed requests for and made recommendations concerning supplies, equipment, and other facilities needed to carry out the functions listed above.

Coordinated and regulated the activities of voluntary organizations interested in carrying out relief and rehabilitation programs overseas, in so far as these responsibilities had been delegated to the Administration by member governments.

Reviewed camp management operations and provided technical advice on the management of camps; determined supply requirements of camps and policies affecting camps.

Arranged for the identification and registration of displaced persons, and for their care and repatriation or return to place of former residence.
